GOOD NEWS FOR HOMEMAKERS

Baby Sitting Is Serious Business
This Part-Time Job Requires Good Skills

What is baby sitting? It is a responsibility. It is a good way to earn money. It can be a memorable experience - - if you bring the right attitude and interest to the job.

Even veteran baby sitters may benefit from some basic considerations. And novices will get off to a good start and eventually become a sought after "expert".

What is Your Attitude toward babies and children? A good sitter enjoys them! She or he works at trying to understand each child's personality and at building good relationships. It helps to learn children's songs, rhymes, tricks and amusing games. A child who feels comfortable and confident with a sitter is more cooperative and also less likely to object to parents leaving. It is good to become familiar with the family and household routines.

Are you mature enough for the responsibility? A sitter should be dependable, use common sense in situations, be serious about her or his duties and able to combine authority with friendliness to minimize any discipline problems with toddlers and older children.

Are you businesslike? Duties should be discussed in advance as well as rate of pay, length of time involved and arrangements for getting home. Talk over privileges, such as snacks, phone, television. Generally speaking, a sitter should not bring guests to the job or allow friends to visit while on duty - - and never without permission from the employer.

On a new job, arrive early. If you must be late or cancel an appointment, call in advance. Ask questions about routines - - feeding, bathing, bedtime and also where necessary items and emergency phone numbers are located. Be prepared to write down messages and anything unusual that happens while parents or guardians are away. Inquire about any possible special problems, allergies or illnesses. In fact, it's a good idea to encourage a written set of instructions along with a phone number where guardians can be reached.

Are you knowledgeable about child care? To be a good sitter it is important to know the basic techniques of feeding, diapering, dressing, bathing and amusing infants and children. Taking care of younger brothers or sisters is a big help. Otherwise increase your skills by asking a friend with young children to give a few pointers or by helping in a church nursery or child-care center. There are many good books on child care and development, if you are interested.

Do you practice good cleanliness standards? Create a good impression by arriving on the job neatly groomed and wearing clean clothes. Washing hands frequently - - before and after preparing meals, feeding children, changing diapers, using the toilet - - is a must! A sitter should keep infants clean and help tots and young children wash face and hands, take a bath and change clothing when necessary. Clean up after using cooking utensils, bottles, nipples, feeding dishes and silverware. Either wash, rinse, dry and put these items away or place in dishwasher. Use a sudsy sponge to wipe up crumbs and spills from the table, countertops, plastic bibs and high chair feeding trays. Chair, tray and tot may all need washing if the child is a beginning self-feeder.

Are you safety-minded? A cardinal rule for baby sitters is never to leave baby or young child unattended. Even when the youngster is asleep, check in now and then.

Accidents are often avoidable if a sitter is on the scene and ready to take action. Be very much aware that a baby or young child can easily fall from a bed, table, high chair, sofa, stairways - - almost anything. Make sure bars on cribs are securely locked and there is nothing inside the crib on which an infant or child could suffocate.

Toddlers are known for getting into everything, so take precautions. Keep sharp items, cleaning supplies and medicines out of their reach. When cooking, turn utensil handles in towards the center of the range. Close doors and drawers, watch toddlers around lamps, cords and electrical outlets. Do not allow a child near any flame or source of heat. Keep ashtrays, matches and cigarettes away from children.

Before giving a child toys to play with, check to be sure that there are no loose parts or jagged edges. Have toys put away after playtime.

Unless a child is in a playpen or some other enclosure, take her or him with you when leaving the room.

There is another side to safety. Keep doors locked from inside and do not admit strangers no matter who they claim to be. It is also wise not to give out information to unknown phone callers. If you have reason to be frightened by phone calls or unknown visitors, get help promptly. Should an accident occur, other than minor scratches and scrapes, call the parents or a neighbor whose number is on the emergency list. In case of a severe accident, call the doctor or ambulance service.

Film To Be Shown By The Appomattox Baptist Youth Association

The Youth Committee of the Appomattox Baptist Association will be showing the movie MY SON, MY SON on Saturday evening, Oct. 4, at the Appomattox County High School auditorium at 7:30 p.m. The public is invited to attend.

In a day when many Christian parents search for answers, this film offers some needed suggestions and guidelines. It is the true story of Bernard Palmer and his son Barry. After Barry's mother died his father remarried. Barry rejected his stepmother and as he grew older he rebelled in many ways. Barry's behaviour brought heartache and embarassment to the Palmer household. Post midnight telephone calls, humiliating visits to the local jail, and the inevitable community gossip were hard to bear. Maybe you can identify with such difficult parent-child relations and you would like to see what happened to Barry Palmer.

Well, it was only after the pursuit of his rebellion had all but swung full course before Barry, like the prodigal, has come to the end of himself and realized he must haye a new beginning. It was the realization of that new beginning in God's love and forgiveness found in Jesus the Christ that brought Good News to the Palmers' Life. Maybe you would like such experience in your family relationship also. We encourage you and invite you to come and see with us this great story of God's gift of a new beginning.

Also featured on the evening program will be the Youth Choir from the Liberty Baptist Church in Appomattox, Va. There is no admission fee.

DECA Officers Met

Officers of the Appomattox County High School Chapter of Distributive Education Clubs of America (DECA) met Tuesday, Sept. 16 at the High School. Groundwork was done for the coming years chapter activities. These activities include plans for monthly meetings, district officers training, fall rally, float for the Homecoming parade and District and State leadership conferences. Also discussed were ideas for a dance and fashion show/beauty contest.

Bud Moses, president, is really excited about the prospects for an outstanding year for the chapter. He set goals for the school year that include more publicity of chapter activities, 100% participation in district competitive events, and preparation of a chapter activities manual that depicts all the events of this year.

Other officers for the year are Alan Harris, vice-president; Virginia Smith, secretary; Nancy Godsey, reporter.A treasurer and parliamentarian will be elected at the first chapter meeting.
